[1] Zora (Female): "Hey. Thanks for coming."
[2] sanjar_nandi (Male): "I wish I'd had more time to prepare a proper analysis on the costs and benefits of your proposed union, but I suppose we'll have to... improvise."
[4] Player: "That's the spirit."
[5] Player: "Sanjar, you have got to scale it back."
[6] Player: "I don't have time for nonsense from either of you, so let's just get this done."
[9] Zora (Female): "Gotta admit... I really thought I was walking into a trap here. I'm ready."
[8] sanjar_nandi (Male): "This is very hard for me."
[7] sanjar_nandi (Male): "I certainly hope you don't mean to undercut the value of due diligence."
[10] Zora (Female): "Sanjar. Stellar Bay's got food and walls, and my people need both. If you'll have us, we're willing to share the space."
[11] sanjar_nandi (Male): "Do you have any idea what that would cost? Why, drawing up the budget alone is going to take weeks."
[14] Player: "What if the Iconoclasts just supported your supply lines?"
[13] Player: "If you're going to draw up a budget, I'd appreciate a paycheck."
[12] Player: "You don't have weeks, Sanjar. Zora's ready to storm the city right now."
[17] sanjar_nandi (Male): "Come now, this is no time for one of your jokes."
[15] Zora (Female): "Though I admit I'd rather not. We've shed enough blood as it is."
[18] Zora (Female): "Not good enough. I need to move a fair amount of my people into the city. We need shelter, Captain."
[61] Zora (Female): "Hey, if we're taking over the company, I'm sure there're a lot of old life insurance policies to cash in."
[21] sanjar_nandi (Male): "Is the only choice here between fighting and starving? We've got to be practical."
[62] Player: "Being stubborn about this isn't going to get you anywhere."
[33] Player: "I'm not saying live outside - just help out in the wilderness once in a while."
[35] Player: "At least that'd be better than nothing."
[36] Player: "I'm sure you can find a way to make it work."
[24] Player: "Come on, Sanjar, you can't start negotiations this way."
[25] Player: "So negative. No wonder the other execs didn't like you."
[65] Zora (Female): "Fine. Some of our people can help with supply lines. But I have to ask for some room in the city itself."
[20] Zora (Female): "Suppose some of our healthier folk could offer aid. Some of us need to stay in the city proper, though."
[40] Zora (Female): "We aren't here for "better than nothing," Captain!"
[41] Zora (Female): "Graham was fit to just eke by on our will to survive. That "make it work" mentality got a lot of good people killed. No more."
[28] sanjar_nandi (Male): "This feels more like an assault than a negotiation."
[44] sanjar_nandi (Male): "Now, there's no cause for rudeness."
[37] sanjar_nandi (Male): "Truly, a compromise? I'm not sure I'd ever have heard as much from Graham."
[42] Zora (Female): "If not for the professional courtesy I owe our friend here, we wouldn't even be talking about this."
[29] Zora (Female): "I'm getting a bit of deja vu, Captain."
[45] Zora (Female): "Rude would be slaughtering you while you're asleep in your home. Isn't that what we do to executive types?"
[43] sanjar_nandi (Male): "You said that with a very ominous tone just now. Was that intentional?"
[32] sanjar_nandi (Male): "I'm confused. The look on your face does not match the words you just said."
[30] sanjar_nandi (Male): "You did a strange thing with your eyes just now. Is this all supposed to mean something to me?"
[39] Zora (Female): "Graham was a murderous fiend, and I'd be shocked if you didn't already know that."
[16] Zora (Female): "Come on. You can't be this obtuse. Tell me Graham wasn't working alone. He couldn't have."
[49] Player: "Something tells me Sanjar didn't know."
[48] Player: "Careful, Zora. Graham was Sanjar's friend."
[50] Player: "I don't think Sanjar would have hurt anyone. If he knew, he didn't agree to it."
[51] Zora (Female): "His fr - HIS friend? Are you fucking kidding me, Captain? I've been standing with Graham for the better part of a decade while this paperclip cowboy sat behind his walls!"
[56] Zora (Female): "Void take his agreement. He stood by and let it happen."
[113] sanjar_nandi (Male): "This feels like one of those times when everyone at headquarters but me is laughing at something. But you two aren't laughing."
[114] Zora (Female): "Amber Heights, you hullhead! Ten years ago! Graham had all those people killed!"
[115] sanjar_nandi (Male): "What? That's not possible. Even for him, that's going too far. "
[116] Player: "It is. We found correspondences between him and the pirates."
[117] Player: "Wasn't it convenient how they all died just after blocking your proposal?"
[118] Player: "You're missing the big picture for the details again."
[135] sanjar_nandi (Male): "But... that means..."
[119] sanjar_nandi (Male): "I certainly didn't think so at the time, but now that you mention it..."
[120] sanjar_nandi (Male): "I... by the void, that's just what Celia would say."
[57] sanjar_nandi (Male): "I had no idea, I swear. We were both fed up with corporate leadership, but I never guessed he'd do something like that."
[67] Zora (Female): "And I'm supposed to believe that?"
[68] Player: "Take it back a notch, Zora. You're here for your people, not the past."
[70] Player: "Sanjar, you're a leader. That means taking responsibility."
[69] Player: "Is this going to take much longer? I have places to be."
[72] Zora (Female): "You're right. Live in the moment."
[74] sanjar_nandi (Male): "For what? Graham was a rabid canid. He may have fooled me, but I wasn't the only one."
[84] sanjar_nandi (Male): "You know, I don't think you're taking this seriously."
[194] Zora (Female): "At this moment, I need a place for my people. You can share or we can take it. Up to you."
[94] Zora (Female): "It... you know, forget it. Look, my people need a place to live. You can give it to us or we can take it. Your choice."
[85] Zora (Female): "Fine, I'll speed this up for our impatient captain here. My people need a place to live and we're prepared to take it from you unless you want to share."
[77] sanjar_nandi (Male): "This shall be good practice for working with the Board, I see. Still, anything's cheaper than war. You have a deal, Zora."
[78] Player: "What about the targeting module?"
[80] Player: "Guess that's that."
[81] Zora (Female): "If we're in Stellar Bay, then we don't need it yet. I just need a promise that when we do, we'll share it."
[82] sanjar_nandi (Male): "Thank you for brokering this arrangement."
[83] Zora (Female): "Yeah. Here's hoping we don't come to regret this."
[108] Zora (Female): "Thanks for coming out, Sanjar. I, uh... guess I'll see you at Stellar Bay."