[85] EstherBlaine (Female): "I've got some time."
[96] Player: "I've got that medicine you were after."
[135] Player: "What do you do here?"
[87] Player: "I'll leave you be."
[99] EstherBlaine (Female): "Thanks. I'll see to it that this medicine gets to the people who need it."
[136] EstherBlaine (Female): "Oh, I'm an actuary. That means I keep tabs on a worker's living expenses. How much it costs to feed, clothe, shelter, bury, and replace your average human worker."
[125] EstherBlaine (Female): "Here - something for your trouble. Nothing personal, but I hope we never do business together again. Don't want to make a habit of consorting with smuggler types."
[137] EstherBlaine (Female): "Technically, I'm employed by the Spacer's Choice Department of Human Resources. "
[126] Player: "Thanks, I guess."
[133] Player: "Never? That's harsh. At least leave me something to remember you by."
[131] Player: "It's not that simple. You want my silence, you're going to have to buy it."
[134] EstherBlaine (Female): "You do have some cheek on you. Lucky for you, I kept a little contingency fee in case you tried to negotiate with me."
[132] EstherBlaine (Female): "And there it is. The reason I don't like depending on a criminal. I kept a little contingency fee in case you decided to shake me down."