[3] Jameson (Male): "What -- how the hell did you get in here?"
[4] Player: "First I shot the raptidons, then I walked up the stairs, and ..."
[5] Player: "I'm very sneaky. Or rapts aren't very observant. Take your pick."
[7] Jameson (Male): "No, not -- I don't care about the beasts!"
[6] Player: "Who cares? Let's get you out of here."
[9] Jameson (Male): "I care about the front door! This is an egregious breach of protocol. How'd you get in?"
[12] Player: "Oh. Anton sent me to get you."
[13] Player: "Truth be told, the raptidons did most of the work on the door. Not sure they know what a lock is."
[68] Player: "Does it matter? You aren't trapped anymore. Let's get."
[15] Jameson (Male): "Ugh. Can't use the centrifuge without supervision. Can't file reports without him double-checking their every word. Can't save myself from mortal peril."
[28] Jameson (Male): "It's like he thinks I'm a child. His hands-on management style is coming to a point of contention, I tell you."
[16] Jameson (Male): "Damnable beasts. At least I'm not trapped here anymore. I'll see you back at town."
[17] Player: "You're upset that he sent me to rescue you?"
[20] Player: "Take it up with him if you like. Now go -- before more rapts find this place."
[22] Jameson (Male): "Please, that man doesn't have an altruistic bone in his body. I just happen to have the metabolic precursors from our last test."
[69] Jameson (Male): "Fair point. I'll see you back at town."
[23] Jameson (Male): "I'd wager my last bit that if you brought back the precursors and left me for dead, Anton wouldn't bat an eye."
[29] Player: "Actually ... that isn't quite true. He said it'd look bad on him if more of his employees died."
[26] Player: "Hand them over, then. Let's test your theory."
[25] Player: "Well, whether he gives a shit about you or not, at least you're alive. Now, let's get out of here."
[31] Jameson (Male): "Wonderful. That's much better. I'm getting out of here so I can personally thank him for his compassion."
[27] Jameson (Male): "Wh -- what? No, come on. There's no call for that. If the way's clear, I'll head on back."
[32] Player: "Right. Stay safe."